FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
April 29, 2015

OTTAWA – The spring 2015 Auditor General of Canada’s Report concludes that key responsibilities have not been fulfilled by the Public Health Agency of Canada and Health Canada to address inadequacies to help the prevention and control of antimicrobial resistance (AMR).

“The Auditor General’s report on AMR highlights concerns raised by the CVMA for many years,” says Dr. Jean Gauvin, the Canadian Veterinary Medical Association (CVMA) President. “CVMA has expressed the need for a comprehensive national all-sector strategy to address the growing concerns surrounding AMR and the unregulated importation and use of active pharmaceutical ingredients in animal agriculture, which poses a potential risk to Canadian public health and food safety.”

The report states there is currently no national strategy to address antimicrobial resistance, which was first identified 20 years ago by the Federal Government. CVMA is pleased to see the recommendation for the Public Health Agency of Canada to “identify priority actions, clarify roles and responsibilities, and establish clear and realistic deadlines for the development of a pan-Canadian strategy to address antimicrobial resistance.”

The report also identifies regulatory loopholes that allow producers to import unlicensed antimicrobial drugs and active pharmaceutical ingredients for use in their own animals, and the need to expand the collection of surveillance data to provide an overall, integrated picture of AMR and use in Canada. CVMA supports Health Canada’s recent announcement of its intention to strengthen regulations that encourage prudent use of antimicrobial drugs used in food-producing animals and increases veterinary oversight of medically-important ones.

“While there is much work to be done to address AMR in Canada,” says Dr. Gauvin, “we are pleased to see commitments to action by the Federal agencies and look forward to collaborating with stakeholders from agriculture, veterinary medicine and human medicine to ensure we stay on target with the December 2016 deadline to align Canada’s stewardship regime with international standards.”

- 30 -

Contact: Tanya Frye
Canadian Veterinary Medical Association (CVMA)
613-236-1162 ext. 128 or communications@cvma-acmv.org